SALT LAKE HIGH
AFTER BUTTE

West Siders Doing Some Strenuous Work for Mining Camp Warriors.

The High school is putting in its best legs now for the big game with Butte next Saturday. Coach D. A. Callahan has the boys working every night until darkness makes practice impossible.

The boys realize that only the hardest kind of work can win the game with Butte. Butte is one of the fastest and strongest teams that ever represented that school. It has more old players on its team than the Red and Black, and Butte will make a hard trial for the championship. The Salt Lake High school will do all in its power to hold the Butte boys and other teams out for a great game.

AMBROSE INJURED IN UTAH-MONTANA GAME

During the second half of the game, Ambrose, left end of the Montana team, was carried from the field with a badly injured leg. It was reported that his leg had been broken. Ambrose was taken to the Holy Cross hospital, where an examination showed the leg was badly bruised, but not broken. He will be removed to the hotel today. The game was a close one, with the Indians leading 10-0 at the end of the first half. The game was a close one, with the Indians leading 10-0 at the end of the first half. STANFORD BEATS VANCOUVER.

Stanford University, Cal., Nov. 3.—Stanford developed wonderful scoring power this afternoon and won the second game between them and Vancouver by a score of 10 to 0. The Cardinals put up a spectacular game, and long passes and pretty punting by the backs had the spectators on their feet for practically the whole hour of play. The Canadians did not play up to their usual game and seemed to be out of condition.

RUGBY GAME ON COAST.

Nevada Cleans Up Berkeley in English Football.

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 3.—The Rugby fifteen of Nevada University, defeated the California varsity this afternoon by the score of 3 to 0. The game was played on a heavy, muddy field, and consequently was not as spectacular as the former contest this season. Nevada was the more aggressive and showed great improvement over their work in the game with Stanford last week, when they defeated it 10 to 0. Nevada scored in the early part of the second half. Holahan carrying the ball over. Magee failed to kick a goal. The ball was in California territory most of the time. The poor showing of California was a disappointment to the Blue and Gold fans who confidently expected victory. The hopes of winning the big game from Stanford next Saturday are not so high tonight as they were earlier in the season.

PRIVATE COURSE ON LONG ISLAND

Millionaires to Build Road of Their Own to Compete for Vanderbilt Cup.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—The most important development in automobile circles during the week is the definite announcement that a private automobile speedway will be built on Long Island and that the work of construction will begin at once and will be rushed with all possible speed, so that the course will be ready for use next year if the Vanderbilt is run in this country. A company has been organized, with W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., as president, and it is intended to spend two million dollars in building the road. Already about 25 percent of the capital stock has been subscribed and more subscriptions are being received daily from all over the country.

To Insure Safety.

Chairman A. O. Partridge, acting secretary of the committee in charge, has issued a statement in which he says that the speedway will be open to all drivers of motor cars. It will be constructed on a private right of way with no grade crossings and will be of sufficient width to insure safety under all conditions.

As a toll road it will have numerous features controlled by toll gates, allowing access at frequent intervals. Each toll gate will take the form of an old English inn, where the motorists will be permitted to refresh themselves under club conditions. Each inn will have its own garage, charging for supplies and will be controlled by the company.

A plan has been introduced to form an information bureau for chauffeurs. The age, efficiency and habits of the applicants are to be investigated and they must prove themselves fitted for the work before the clubs will place their names on the list.

IF IT WASN'T GOLF
IT WAS CROQUET

It was a twosome. The player who drove off first had banded legs. The second in driving off did not notice that his opponent had got in front of him and the ball ran through between the opponent's legs. Turning around in anger the banded-legged one said: "Here, mun, that's no golf!" "Weel," said the other, "if it's not golf it's croquet."—Scotch Referee.

TONOPAH LANDS GANS - HERMANN FIGHT.

Cincinnati, Nov. 3.—Joe Gans, lightweight champion of the world, met "Kid" Hermann of Chicago here today and signed articles to fight twenty rounds, or to a finish, as the club may desire, on New Year's day, before the Tonopah (Nev.) Athletic club. The purse is to be $20,000, winner to get 60 and the loser 40 per cent. The weight will be 133 pounds two hours before the gong. Gans will terminate his theatrical tour at once and go west to train. Barney Gerard acted as Gans' manager and Nat Lewis was with "Kid" Hermann.

BURSTED BALL
MAKES TROUBLE

Crowd Thinks Player Is Shot and Chases Opponent Into Swamps.

A queer accident happened last week on Yale's football field, in which Burt L. Brown, a senior, was knocked unconscious and left for dead on the field while the spectators were chasing the giant fullback of an opposing team into the nearby swamps.

While the varsity team was playing Pennsylvania State on Yale field, the "Sons of Belial" team, composed of Yale seniors, had a game with the Mt. Carmel Giants, a team of stalwart farmer lads.

A big crowd of Yale supporters was on hand to cheer the college men. The second half of the game was nearly over when Brown, the Yale halfback, who had the ball, made a run down the field for the Mt. Carmel goalpost. Just as he was about to push the ball over he was tackled by the giant fullback of the Mt. Carmels. There was a report like a pistol shot and Brown was killed as if dead.

MAY QUIT CONFERENCE

Michigan Tired of Being Governed by Bunch of Small Schools.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 2.—The University of Michigan may withdraw from the western intercollegiate conference as a result of the widespread dissatisfaction among Michigan followers of the game with the manner in which the present football season is being conducted.

Already a determined effort is on foot to secure Michigan's withdrawal. Coach Yost, Trainer Fitzpatrick and especially Manager Baird are said to favor the action, while the student body unanimously advocates it. The question will be brought to the attention of the faculty board of control at once.

The argument is that Michigan is ruled by a lot of small colleges which she never meets and that the whole athletic system here is suffering from the result. Especial objection is raised to the five-game rule. In fact, the whole body of new rules passed by the conference is looked upon as a triumph in diplomacy on the part of Chicago which has done Michigan up.

This year the Illinois game is the only contest Michigan has with a conference college, and her withdrawal would not prevent the scheduling of games and maintenance of cordial relations with members of the Big Five.

SHORTAGE SURE ENOUGH.

Sub-Treasury at St. Louis Touched
Up for $61,500.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury Keop today stated that a shortage of $61,500 had been found in the St. Louis sub-treasury, but when the shortage occurred and who is responsible for it, he declined to state, saying that the matter was under investigation by treasury officials in conjunction with those of the department of justice. The announcement was made immediately after the return of G. C. Bentz, deputy assistant treasurer of the United States in Washington, from St. Louis, where he has been counting the cash to determine whether or not there was a shortage in the cash as reported by the assistant treasurer of the United States.

YEAR'S DEATHS
ON DIAMOND

Nearly As Many Killed This Season in Baseball as on Gridiron.

Now that the knights of the diamond have given place to the fiercer heroes of the gridiron, fans and football enthusiasts are casting up a few comparisons as to the final cost in human lives of these two sports, the opinion is that "football is not so bad after all."

This season twelve baseball players were killed. The batted ball, the pitched ball and the thrown ball all proved deadly. Aside from those who met death in games, baseball has, indirectly, at least, a dozen victims, who fell off roofs, died of heart disease or were run over by cars while hurrying to games.

The list of players to whom the great national sport was fatal is:
Joseph Schneider, Germantown, Pa., died of exhaustion after home-run at Belmont, July 2.

Frank Welson, Philadelphia; struck and killed by bat that slipped from friend's hand in game, May 26.

George T. Snyder, old-time baseball player, stricken with heart disease as he made a two-bagger.

William Garrison, Philadelphia, ruptured a blood vessel striking a ball in Camden, April 12.

Casper Musselman, Catsasauqua, Pa., hit over heart by pitched ball, Aug. 20.

Alfred Mayer, struck with bat in game at Allentown, April 22.

John Aitling, skull fractured by pitched ball at Pottstown, July 4.

Joseph J. McDonald of Mount Holly, N. J., hit on head by batted ball, September 3.

Frederick Whitaker, Hamilton Terrace, N. J., hit over heart by batted ball, July 23.

Eugene Harris, 15 years old, hit on head by batted ball at Asheville, April 8.

Thomas F. Burke, struck by pitched ball at Lynn, Mass., Aug. 11.

Henry Dyebl, hit by pitched ball at Wooster, O., June 16.

Several spectators of ball games were killed. Thomas P. Baker was hit by a bat that slipped from a player's hands at Camden, June 16.

George C. Hackett was killed by a batted ball in Philadelphia May 31.

Eva Benson died of excitement watching a game in Philadelphia July 22.

Fear that the Athletics might lose brought a stroke of apoplexy to James H. Benson of Philadelphia on April 15.

And it goes. The list here given is necessarily incomplete, but it gives an idea of accidents which happened in one part of the country from baseball.

SERMON ON DEATH OF BUCK EWING

Minister Preaches One Who Knows Something About National Game.

That Willing (Buck) Ewing was respected by men outside of the world of ballroom can be shown, when the Rev. Don G. Tullis, pastor of the Popular Street Presbyterian church, spoke the following to an audience of men and boys in Cincinnati:

"The shades of evening are beginning to fall upon the diamond of life, the game is almost ended. Breathless, the crowd sits awaiting the end.

"The score is a tie. Everything is in the balance.

"This day will decide, not the world's championship, but the greater struggle of eternity.

"One there is among the war-scarred veterans upon whom all eyes are fastened.

"He has won many a game before. He has heard the plaudits of thousands, and received the applause of millions in his day.

"Will he be able to win this game? The shadows descend, the crowd is breathless.

"All depends upon him.

"It is no time for a single. He has made them before, and has won many a game with them.

"It is no time for no good. There is but one thing will count in this closing moment—a home run.

"Can he do it?

"Death huris the ball toward the batter.

"Strike one," the umpire cries.

"Again the sphere flies by while the batter stands unmoved.

"There is but one more chance. He punts to himself together, his frame like iron.

"His features are immovable; the ball once more speeds toward the plate.

"With one supreme effort he swings the stick and sends the ball to a distant corner of the field, and the less Ewing starts upon his last circle of the bases.

"One, two, three—the ball is being rapidly returned.

"Will he make it?

"It is a close race. He takes the one and only chance and throws himself headlong upon the ground for the last slide.

"Suddenly the dust clears away and the great umpire of the universe is heard to say: 'Safe at home.'"

TIGERS, 42; DARTMOUTH, 11

Team Which Beat Tigers Last Season Outclassed This Year.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 3.—Princeton took revenge on Dartmouth today for last year's defeat by rolling up 42 points against the New Hampshire eleven. Princeton started the game in whirlwind fashion and scored in the first two minutes of play. Glaze caught the ball on the kick-off, but his team failed to gain, and he punted to E. Dillon, who picked his way through the whole Dartmouth team and sprinted over the goal line for a touchdown. The visitors fought pluckily throughout the game, but they were hopelessly outclassed and only made two first downs during the contest. Their line was heavy and fast and their backs speedy, but they made scarcely any use of the new rules and could not gain through Princeton's line. After E. Dillon's sensational touchdown, Princeton, by a series of plays around end and back, between end and tackle, soon had the ball on Dartmouth's 35-yard line, from which point Wister ran for a touchdown, after catching the ball on a forward pass. The other touchdowns came in rapid succession.

ENGLAND LACKS
GOOD FIGHTERS

No First-Class Pugilists There
—Jack O'Brien Could Defeat Best They Have.

An Englishman, after careful study of the fighters over in Johnny Bull's realm and their Yankee contemporaries, arises to declare that England today is without a fighter of any merit in any of the classes.

His knowledge of English fistic matters sheds considerable light on pugilistic affairs over there, and also shows what a cinch Jack O'Brien is going up against to take on heavies across the pond. The Englishman says:

"The fighting game is down and out in England. There is not one fighter at present in that country who would rank as a third-rater in this country. The heavy, middle, light, feather and bantam-weights (that is, the whole lot) are a thing of the past. Owen Moran is about the only feather-weight who could come over here and hand out a whipping to most of the American feather-weights."

Could Beat Jabez.

The other five ones are at present in this country trying to make a little coin. They are Spike Robson, Fred Welsh and Ike Bradley. Of the two former light-weights Fred Welsh is by far the better man. I cannot say that Jabez White ever ran away from him, yet at the same time White knew that should he ever have to fight Welsh a twenty-round battle, Welsh would beat him.

"It would be a repetition of the Nelson-Britt affair, where the fighter beat the boxer. Welsh, the fighter, and White, the boxer. Jabez has been a very steady boy and has saved his name to all the welter-weights. He has a nice business of his own, and tells his friends he prefers to look after his new business interests than to look after his ring career.

"At the present time there are scores of young men in Great Britain, who, if properly trained, could give some of the present American champions a good run for their money, but there is nobody to train them and nobody to give them any encouragement.

Easy for Americans.

"England is void of first-class men. Jack O'Brien could eat up all the English heavy and middle-weights in one night. Honey Melody could do the same to all the welter-weights. If Gans or Nelson had to put foot into England there would be no such thing as a light-weight on the market, unless Jabez White had to come out of his shell and let himself be made to look like a bad shilling.

"Abie Attell could meet a worthy opponent in Owen Moran, and probably win the decision by his cleverness, if they were to meet anywhere outside the National Sporting Club. They met at the National Sporting club in the present American champions a good run for their money, but there is nobody to train them and nobody to give them any encouragement.

I refer you to the Bowker-Neill fight. I saw that fight, and while I had a little money on Bowker, yet I thought a just decision would have been a draw. If these men had to meet again I am afraid Bowker would soon lose his title as 'world's champion,' for he, like the rest, seems to have lost interest in strict training.

"Some day, perhaps, we may see a revival of the many art. Then should the public become interested, I have no doubt that better purses would be hung up, and good inducements given to the young men who are clever with their fists.

"Until such a time arrives, you may class the English fighter as 'down and out,' and not worth the time and trouble of any American manager trying to get his man a match with any of them."

YALE'S SHOWING DISAPPOINTING

Defeats West Point by Score of 10 to 6, but Army Does Better Work.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Yale, 10; West Point, 6. Today's game was lively enough, but the showing made by Yale was a disappointment. Their line work was poor, and fumbling of punts spoiled their open play. The odds at all times put up the stiffest kind of contest.

The touchdown for the army was made after Jones had fumbled Mountford's punt on Yale's 45-yard line. A forward pass sent the pigskin twenty yards nearer the goal. By repeated attacks the army got the ball to Yale's 10-yard line, where the New Haven men were penalized five yards. Smith then smashed through guard and tackle and Hill carried the ball over for a touchdown, the first score recorded against Yale this season. Mountford kicked the goal.

Early in the second half Yale evened matters. In an exchange of punts Morse punted out of bounds at West Point's 10-yard line and Mountford's return kick was blocked. Alcott going over with the ball, Veeder kicked goal.

The time limit was scarcely four minutes away when Mountford punted out to the army's 30-yard line after Yale had failed to kick goal from the field. Bigelow sent the ball over the bar. The line-up:

IS BASEBALL A TRUST?

Former Manager of White Sox, Who Was Fired, Says
It Is.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—James J. Callahan, formerly manager of the Chicago American baseball team and during the last season manager of a local club in this city, today filed a suit against the Chicago American league club asking damages to the amount of $3,000. The action is based upon an alleged breach of contract, but Callahan's attorney declares that when the case comes to trial they will show that the American baseball league "is as much a trust as the Standard Oil company."

Trouble arose between Callahan and the American league several months ago when President Charles Comiskey of the local American league team, according to Callahan, repudiated a contract with Callahan which provided for the National league for the world's championship.

NAVY DEFEATED.

Annapolis, Nov. 3.—The naval academy football team met defeat at the hands of the strong Pennsylvania state eleven this afternoon. The visitors scored one touchdown, but failed to kick goal. The midshipmen were unable to count.

Perkins, former secretary of the commission, who made a complaint against Mr. Fairbanks; State Treasurer Chapin and State Auditor Turner.
